

The Association for Education & Ageing

Do you....

- Want to understand more about learning and ageing?
- Work with older people as clients?
- Teach and train older learners?
- Manage or teach staff who do?
- Want support for your own learning as an older person

*AEA is a registered charity: Registered Charity No. 1050439
Patrons: Baroness Sally Greengross, Derek Legge, Professor Arthur Stock, OBE*

Then the Association for Education and Ageing will enable you to:

- Make contact with a variety of other professionals with a common interest
- Make contact with older mature students interested in learning
- Exchange views and experience about learning in later life: gain support and fresh ideas
- Keep informed about academic and research developments in the field of education and ageing
- Participate in national and regional conferences and meetings

The Association for Education and Ageing is a membership organisation open to all. Its particular strength is combining the interests of research, practice and policy concerning later life learning. Importantly, it involves older learners in dialogue with each other and with the professionals and volunteers who work in the services that provide and support learning.

The Association for Education and Ageing was founded in 1985 to promote:

- older people's education and learning activities
- the education and training of professionals and volunteers who work with older people
- public education about the ageing process

It aims to be responsive to demographic and socio-economic trends and policy developments that affect older people's abilities to lead active and fulfilling lives by:

- encouraging the sharing and dissemination of good practice in the broad field of education and later life
- exposing theory and practice to critical scrutiny
- producing a quarterly Digest
- arranging an annual conference and linking with a range of organisations and individuals internationally
- enabling networking among people from a wide variety of disciplines, services and interest, including many retirees
- supporting and promoting the interests of older people engaged in learning
