

THE REPRESENTATION OF OLDER PEOPLE IN AGEING RESEARCH

A joint series from the Centre for Ageing and Biographical Studies, The Open University and the Centre for Policy on Ageing that examines both traditional and innovative methodological approaches to ageing research

Reflecting on User Involvement and Participatory Research edited by Sheila Peace and Jonathan Hughes

In 2010, user involvement is viewed as a sine qua non of good practice in health and social welfare. The same is increasingly true of publicly funded research that investigates issues connected with ageing. 'Professional' researchers continue to question how research should be conducted and disseminated. The papers here show how researchers can adopt ways of working with older people that better recognises their potential contributions.

Oral History and Ageing edited by Joanna Bornat and Josie Tetley

The authors, all leading UK oral historians, illustrate four very different approaches within an oral history tradition, yet each has resonance and relevance for gerontologists. The aim in presenting this collection is to stimulate further discussions and opportunities to share research approaches and findings amongst oral historians and gerontologists in the hope that creative research partnerships may ensue in the future.

Researching Age and Multiple Discrimination

edited by Richard Ward and Bill Bytheway

'very well written and gives the reader a clear insight ... into the older population. ... suitable [for students] at both degree and Masters level.'

Quality in Ageing

This timely report addresses the complexities of age-based inequalities, revealed through everyday experiences of discrimination. A debate is pursued throughout on how best to engage with and reflect personal experience and so to explore what it means to live with discrimination as an everyday problem in later life.

£10.00 100pp No 8 ISBN 9781901097115 2008

Making Observations: The Potential of Observation Methods for Gerontology edited by Andrew Clark

'The richness of the content of Making Observations makes it an academic "must" whilst its reflective and discursive tone ensures it is inclusive and readable.'

Dementia

Spanning a range of disciplines, the authors outline different disciplinary and methodological approaches to conducting observation research in studies of ageing.

£10.00 84pp No 6 ISBN 9781901097016 2007

Language and Later Life: Issues, Methods and Representations

edited by Rebecca L. Jones and John Percival

The contributors consider both methodological and substantive issues about ageing and later life focusing on language in several ways: in the sense of different first languages; in the sense of speech and difficulties with communicating; and the ways in which older people are represented in language.

£10.00 88pp No 7 ISBN 9781901097061 2006

Recruitment and Sampling: Qualitative Research with Older People

edited by Caroline Holland

'This small book will be useful to undergraduates, graduates and research staff. By presenting honest accounts of some of the challenges that researchers encounter, the book makes an invaluable contribution to a neglected topic.'

Ageing & Society

Although this volume describes five quite different studies of ageing, common themes include: 'vulnerability' and ethics; the role of the gatekeeper; under- and over-researched groups; sensitive topics and the role of language; and older people as research partners.

£10.00 88pp No 5 ISBN 9781901097955 2005

'[This] occasional series ... provides absorbing insights into what it is really like to do hands-on empirical research with older people.'

Everyday Living in Later Life

edited by Bill Bytheway

'... of interest to practitioners and students ... and researchers looking for innovative, inclusive and potentially empowering ways of researching alongside [older people].'

The British Journal of Social Work

How do older people really get through their days? The contributions focus on the ways in which everyday life gets recorded and narrated, using qualitative tools of documentary research – diaries, letters, logs, etc. – that enable the first-hand recording of these experiences.
